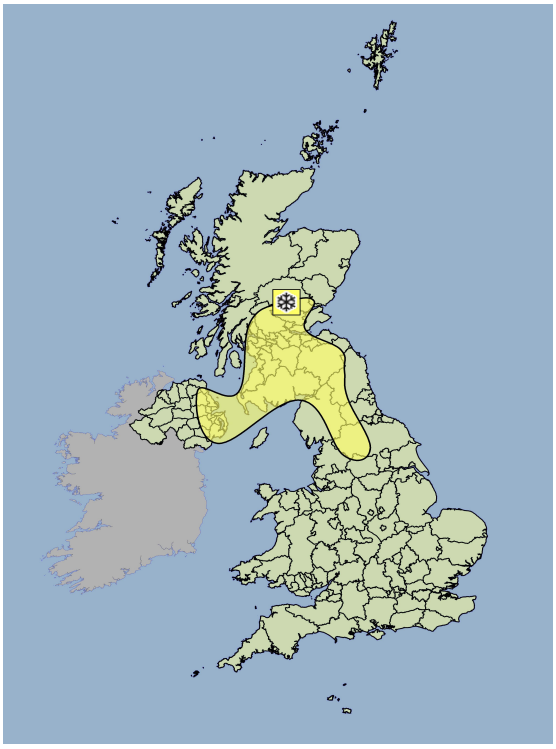
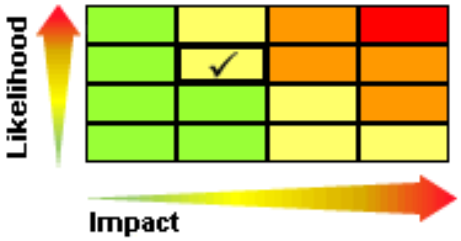
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The active frontal system which brings rain on Tuesday will increasingly come into contact with colder air, with the likelihood that it will start to turn to sleet or snow in places early on Wednesday. The situation is finely balanced, and the precipitation may remain as rain over parts of the area. This warning is likely to be updated.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 00:10 on Wed, 17th Feb 2016 until 10:00 on Wed, 17th Feb 2016

Outbreaks of rain are likely to turn to sleet or snow in places later on Tuesday night and during Wednesday morning, giving local accumulations. This will be primarily, but not exclusively, over the higher ground where 2 to 6 cm may accumulate, although parts of the warning area may escape. At lower elevations, a slushy cover of up to a centimetre or so is possible.

Please be aware of the potential for some difficult driving conditions overnight and into the Wednesday morning rush hour.
